Journeys in Color and Light:
The Search for Connick Windows in New Jersey

To experience the true Connick, we must look for, find, and piece together his smaller commissions. If not, we miss out on the full reach of his glass canon. Often we focus on his magisterial monuments - Princeton Chapel, Heinz Chapel, Marsh Chapel - but Connick's hand pulses just as vibrantly and viscerally in his lesser known works.

Since 2011 architectural historian John Gomez, who holds an M.S. in Historic Preservation from Columbia University, has been seeking out Connick's forgotten windows in New Jersey - including magnificent church buildings in Newark, Englewood, and Montclair - and will share his discoveries this evening in words and photographs.

*This event is free, and open to the public.
Reception to follow.*
